Models of Understanding Self – T-E-A Model

Models of Understanding Self – T-E-A Model

Introduction

The T-E-A Model is a simple and effective model used to understand the self. It explains that a person's behavior and personality are influenced by three key components: Thoughts (T), Emotions (E), and Actions (A). These three elements are interconnected and together shape how we perceive ourselves and interact with others.

Meaning of T-E-A Model

T-E-A stands for:

- T – Thoughts
- E – Emotions
- A – Actions

👉 The model shows that our thoughts influence emotions, and emotions influence our actions (behavior).

Components of T-E-A Model

1. Thoughts (T)

Thoughts are ideas, beliefs, and perceptions in our mind.

- They include positive or negative thinking patterns
- Thoughts affect how we interpret situations

👉 Example:

"If I think I can do well in an exam, I feel confident."

2. Emotions (E)

Emotions are feelings that arise from our thoughts.

- Examples: happiness, fear, anger, confidence
- Emotions affect our mental state and communication

👉 Example:

Positive thinking → happiness

Negative thinking → anxiety

3. Actions (A)

Actions are the behaviors or responses based on thoughts and emotions.

- They are visible and observable
- Actions determine outcomes in real life

👉 Example:

Confidence → active participation

Fear → avoiding situations

Relationship Between T-E-A

- Thoughts → create Emotions
- Emotions → influence Actions
- Actions → can again affect Thoughts

👉 It is a continuous cycle.

2. Improves emotional control
3. Enhances communication skills
4. Supports positive thinking
5. Helps in behavior improvement

Models of Understanding Self – Johari Window

Meaning of Johari Window

The Johari Window is divided into four areas (quadrants) that represent different aspects of self-awareness.
👉 It improves communication by increasing understanding between self and others.

Four Quadrants of Johari Window

1. Open Area (Arena)

- Known to self and others
- Includes behavior, skills, and attitudes openly shared

👉 Example: You and your friends know that you are good at coding

✅ Larger open area → Better communication

2. Blind Area (Blind Spot)

- Known to others but not to self
- Includes habits or traits others can see but you cannot

👉 Example: You may interrupt others without realizing it

✅ Reduced by taking feedback

3. Hidden Area (Facade)

- Known to self but not to others
- Includes secrets, fears, and personal feelings

👉 Example: You feel nervous but don't show it

✅ Reduced by self-disclosure (sharing)

4. Unknown Area

- Unknown to both self and others
- Includes hidden talents or unconscious behaviors

👉 Example: A skill you haven't discovered yet

✅ Discovered through new experiences

Preconditions for Mediation

Preconditions for Mediation

(Part 1 – Third Party Intervention: Mediation)

Introduction

Mediation is effective only if certain preconditions are met. These preconditions ensure that the parties are ready, willing, and able to resolve the conflict constructively with the help of a mediator.

1. Willingness of Parties

- Both parties must be open and willing to participate in mediation.
 - Mediation cannot succeed if one or both parties refuse to cooperate.

2. Presence of a Neutral Mediator

- The mediator must be impartial, unbiased, and trusted by both parties.
 - Neutrality ensures fairness and credibility of the process.

3. Recognition of Conflict

- Parties must acknowledge that a conflict exists.
 - Denial or avoidance of the problem prevents mediation from starting.

4. Voluntary Participation

- Mediation should be voluntary, not forced.
 - Forced participation may lead to resistance or non-compliance.

5. Good Faith Negotiation

- Parties must intend to resolve the conflict genuinely.
 - Willingness to listen, compromise, and explore solutions is essential.

6. Confidentiality Assurance

- Parties must agree that discussions during mediation remain confidential.
 - Confidentiality builds trust and encourages open communication.

7. Focus on Mutual Interest

- Parties must be willing to seek solutions that benefit both sides, not just pursue personal gain.

Example

- Two employees have a conflict over task allocation. Mediation is possible only if they:
 - Recognize the conflict

Mediation Process

Mediation Process

(Part 1 – Third Party Intervention: Mediation)

Introduction

Mediation is a structured process in which a neutral third party (mediator) facilitates discussion between conflicting parties to help them reach a mutually acceptable solution. The mediation process ensures that conflicts are resolved amicably, fairly, and constructively.

Steps in the Mediation Process

Step	Description
1. Preparation	Mediator gathers information about the conflict, identifies parties involved, and sets ground rules.
2. Introduction	Mediator explains the purpose, process, role, and confidentiality rules to both parties.
3. Statement of the Problem	Each party presents their view of the conflict without interruptions. Mediator ensures clarity and understanding.

6. Negotiation	Mediator helps parties discuss options, evaluate consequences, and reach compromises or agreements.
7. Agreement	Parties agree on a solution, which is documented formally to ensure clarity and commitment.
8. Follow-up	Mediator may check progress and compliance to ensure that the solution is implemented and relationships maintained.

Key Points

- The mediator does not impose a solution; their role is facilitative.
- Mediation emphasizes voluntary participation, neutrality, confidentiality, and cooperation.
- The process is flexible and may vary depending on the conflict and parties involved.

Example

- Two employees have a conflict over shared project responsibilities.
 - Each explains their perspective (Statement of Problem)

Preconditions for Mediation (Part 2 – Intercultural Communication and Conflict Resolution)

Preconditions for Mediation (Part 2 – Intercultural Communication and Conflict Resolution)

Introduction

In intercultural conflicts, mediation becomes more complex due to differences in values, beliefs, communication styles, and norms. Certain preconditions must be met to ensure effective mediation across cultures.

Preconditions for Mediation in Intercultural Context

1. Mutual Respect for Cultural Differences

- Parties and mediator must acknowledge and respect cultural norms and values.

- Avoids misinterpretation of gestures, expressions, or communication styles.

3. Willingness to Understand

- Parties must be open to learning about each other's cultural perspectives.
- Reduces stereotypes and promotes empathy.

4. Effective Cross-Cultural Communication

- Parties should communicate clearly and avoid cultural jargon or idioms that may be misunderstood.
- Mediator facilitates translation of meaning rather than words.

5. Voluntary Participation

- Both parties must choose to participate willingly; coercion may worsen intercultural tension.

6. Neutrality and Impartiality

- Mediator must remain unbiased and culturally sensitive.
- Ensures trust and acceptance of the mediation process.

7. Confidentiality
